

Alison Levitt QC

"An excellent advocate who assimilates all the evidence in a case really quickly. Clients find her really calm and reassuring."
Chambers UK 2021

Year of Call: 1988 QC: 2008

020 7353 5324

Alison Levitt QC returned to full-time advocacy practise after 5 years in the public service, followed by setting up a new department in a major law firm. From 2009-2014 Alison was the Principal Legal Advisor to the DPP and later was head-hunted by Mishcon de Reya to establish their White Collar Crime and Investigations department.

She provides advocacy in crime including business crime, and in cases with significant foreign and/or public policy elements.

She has prepared independent reports on many complex issues, including the Jimmy Savile case, and has carried out two recent safeguarding inquiries.

She has appeared in many high profile matters, and has a particular liking for appellate cases.

Alison accepts Direct Access instructions.

Business Crime & Financial Services

Mishcon de Reya LLP (2014 – 2018)

Partner, Head of White Collar Crime and Investigations

In 2014 Alison was head-hunted to start a white collar crime department at Mishcon de Reya, a major international law Firm which had no previous criminal law practice. Alison practised across the interface of criminal, regulatory and civil financial law: all forms of financial and business conduct both in the UK and other jurisdictions including bribery, fraud, theft, proceeds of crime, extradition and Interpol Red Notices.

Alison is an expert in private prosecutions; at the CPS she wrote the Legal Guidance (which is still in force) and approved all decisions for every private prosecution referred to the CPS for a period of 2 ½ years.

At Mishcon de Reya, she conducted the largest private prosecution ever brought. (Allseas v. Paul Sultana, a 100m euro fraud)

She has conducted major internal investigations for clients, which include allegations both of financial wrongdoing and sexual impropriety and harassment following the 'MeToo' movement. Examples are: investigations for a national charity, a major international law firm; currently conducting one for St Hugh's College Oxford.

Alison gives lectures, both nationally and internationally in this area of work; recent examples include:

- New York University 10th Annual Tax Controversy Forum: “The legal landscape overseas: strategies to navigate international asset seizures”
- CIFAS Annual Conference 2018
- Cambridge International Economic Crime Symposium 2018: “Are Unexplained Wealth Orders a step too far?”
- International Bar Association^[1] (Paris): “Double-jeopardy in the transnational context”
- Inside Government : “Effectively Reporting, Tackling and Preventing Hate Crime”
- Intellectual Property Office : “How Public Private Partnerships can detect, punish and deter intellectual property crime”
- IBA (Panama): “Recent developments in UK anti-corruption laws”
- Cumberland Lodge: “Corporate Crime and Punishment”
- To a large group of General Counsel from major international corporations: “The new corporate offence of failing to prevent tax evasion”
- Deutsche Bank Compliance Team: “Why Corruption Matters”
- IBA (Washington): “Illicit Financial Flows in Africa”
- Cambridge International Economic Crime Symposium : “A new approach to tackling economic crime” (reported in the New York Times).

Major cases:

- R v. Brooks & Others (News of the World Phoen hacking cases)
- R v. Levi Bellfield
- Investigating CPS failure to charge Jimmy Savile whilst he was alive and writing a report which the then-DPP described as a “watershed moment” for the Criminal Justice System;
- National security cases at the top level

Advocacy as Principal Legal Advisor

Alison conducted cases as counsel in the Court of Appeal on behalf of the DPP, where there were serious issues of principle for the CPS. For example Mitchell [2014] 2 Cr. App. R 17, which was concerned with the limits of the offence of misconduct in a public office. The prosecution lost but the Court was complimentary (“advanced with characteristic skill... by Miss Levitt” – Sir Brian Leveson PQPD)

She was the expert on ‘Double Jeopardy’ cases (fresh evidence appeals against acquittals); during her five years she conducted every DPP application to the Court of Appeal in this category of case.

Criminal Defence

From 1991-2001 Alison was a heavyweight defence criminal advocate at another leading criminal set of chambers. Her cases consisted of murder, rape (including non-recent and offences against children), fraud, armed robbery and serious drugs offences.

Prior to taking silk, Alison appeared 17 times in the Court of Appeal, Criminal Division. She was praised by the Court of Appeal for her knowledge of the law and her capacity to master complex detail.
