Madeleine Price accepts a broad range of instructions across Chambers' practice areas, with a focus on criminal defence and professional discipline.

Madeleine is regularly instructed in serious and complex matters before the Crown Court involving a broad range of criminal offences. As sole counsel, she has been instructed in document-heavy criminal cases where she has been commended for her diligence, strategic thinking and consistent hard work. Madeleine often acts in cases involving vulnerable witnesses and defendants, including youths.

She has extensive experience in representing clients charged with motoring offences, particularly those who are at risk of disqualification.

Madeleine's practice encompasses public inquiries, and she is currently instructed as part of a team to undertake document reviews on behalf of the Thirlwall Inquiry. In the professional discipline sphere, Madeleine acts on behalf of regulators and is regularly instructed by the Nursing and Midwifery Council.

Before coming to the Bar, Madeleine worked as an intern for death penalty attorneys in Georgia, USA. She assisted with trials involving issues of intellectual disability and mental illness, with a key focus on sentencing-phase mitigation.
